Monthly investment commentary: August

Global equity markets rose in August as a tonal shift from the Federal Reserve increased optimism about interest rate cuts in September. US and European indices ended the month near all-time highs. In the UK, globally exposed large caps participated in the rally, while the more domestic-focused mid and small caps underperformed. The FTSE All-Share was up by 0.9%, while the DNSCI (XIC) was down by 1.2% and the Fund's total asset total return by 1.3%.

Crest Nicholson suffered with housebuilder peers against a backdrop of 'higher-for-longer' mortgage costs. Videndum fell sharply following its interim results. Trading is still weak, with film and TV production yet to recover to pre Hollywood strike levels. The balance sheet remains burdened by debt and a refinancing is required before August next year.

Among the winners, Chesnara rose as the market further digested its acquisition of HSBC Life and imminent graduation to the FTSE 250. Dowlais was strong on the look-through basis to American Axle, who are to acquire the business with a mixture of cash and shares.

The biggest winner and loser were Vesuvius and Morgan Advanced Materials, which have both reported weaker trading through the summer. They were also either side of an M&A transaction in August, with Vesuvius to buy the Molten Metal Systems business from Morgan Advanced Materials. Despite the relative share price moves, this looks like a good deal for both parties.

The theme of M&A appetite for UK companies appears to have survived the quieter holiday period. August saw a recommended bid by Unite for Empiric Student Property, a holding in the fund, and an approach for JTC, which is not a holding.

Risk warnings

Capital may be at risk as the value of investments may go down as well as up and is not guaranteed; therefore investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Past performance is not a guide to future performance, nor a reliable indicator of future results or performance.

Investments in shares of smaller companies are generally considered to carry a higher degree of risk as the market for their shares may be less liquid than that for shares of larger companies, making shares of smaller companies more difficult to buy and sell.

The performance of shares of smaller companies may be more volatile than the shares of larger companies over short time periods; therefore investors should regard such investments as long term.

There can be no guarantee that the investment objective of the Fund will be achieved or provide the dividends and returns sought by the Fund.

An investment in the Fund is only suitable for investors who are capable of evaluating the merits and risks of such an investment and who have sufficient resources to be able to bear any losses which may arise from such an investment (which may be equal to the whole amount invested). Such an investment should be regarded as long term in nature and complementary to existing investments in a range of other financial assets and should not form a major part of an investment portfolio.

An investment trust is a public limited company, the shares of which are traded on the Main Market of the London Stock Exchange. Accordingly, the ability of shareholders to sell their shares will be dependent on the market price of the shares. The shares may trade at a discount or premium to their net asset value.

Investment trusts may borrow money in order to make further investments. This is known as gearing. The effect of gearing can enhance returns to shareholders in rising markets but will have the opposite effect on returns in falling markets.

The Fund's Ordinary shares (Ords) are geared by the Zero Dividend Preference shares (ZDPs) and rank for repayment of capital after the ZDPs and any creditors of the Fund. A positive net asset value for the Ords will be dependent upon the Fund's assets being sufficient to meet the prior capital entitlements of the holders of the ZDPs. The Ords should therefore be regarded as carrying above average risk. The ZDPs are not a protected or guaranteed investment. In particular, should the Fund be wound up prior to its planned winding up date, holders of ZDPs would only receive their accrued capital entitlement to the date of winding up - which would be less than the final anticipated capital entitlement of the ZDPs.
