Objective

The investment objective of the Fund is to seek to achieve a total return, calculated on an income reinvested basis, greater than the Deutsche Numis Smaller Companies Index (excluding Investment Companies) over the long term, with the focus on rolling five year periods.

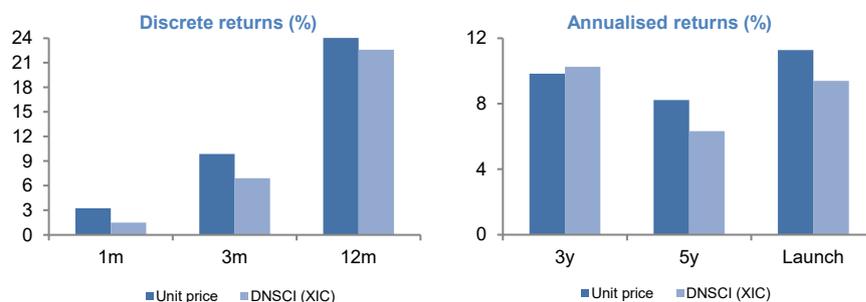

Investment style: Value

Aberforth are value investors who buy shares in companies that they calculate to be selling below their intrinsic value. This is determined through detailed financial and industrial analysis, combined with a valuation approach that focuses on both stockmarket and corporate worth.

Investment performance (annualised total returns)

Growth (%)	1m	3m	12m	3y	5y	Launch

Monthly investment commentary: February

February brought continued momentum in UK equity markets. Large caps were strongest, with the FTSE All-Share rising by 6.5%, ahead of the benchmark small cap index, the DNSCI (XIC), which was up by 1.5%. The Fund outperformed, rising by 3.2%. Its value style was a tailwind and out-weighted a headwind from the size factor, with smaller small companies lagging larger small companies.

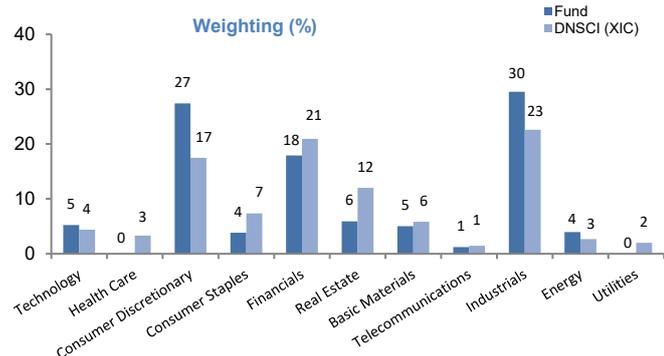

Fears about the impact of agentic AI engulfed numerous software and platform companies in February. The Fund is comparatively light in these and so its relative performance benefited overall. However, holdings in MONY Group and NCC Group were affected. The former fell on the announcement of an AI powered price comparison website in the US, while concerns about the effect of AI on cybersecurity profitability hit the latter. In both cases, the actual risks and opportunities of AI are as yet far from clear. The other notable detractor in the month was industrial LED manufacturer Dialight, which was weak on no news but has enjoyed a strong recent share price run.

The threat of AI to industrial and resource companies is lower and holdings here helped the Fund's performance. Oil & gas explorer and producer EnQuest rose with the oil price and optimism about possible changes to the UK government's tax regime. XP Power again performed well as positive news flow continued from the semiconductor equipment end-market and as competitors reported good results. Capital, which rents drilling equipment to mining companies, benefited from further growth in exploration budgets. M&A interest in the asset class was again a feature, with aerospace and automotive engineer Senior rising after a private equity suitor was revealed.

Data sources & calculations

All data supplied by Aberforth, except DNSCI (XIC) data (from Deutsche Numis/Paul Marsh and Elroy Dimson – London Business School) and FTSE data (from FTSE International Limited).

Performance returns are total returns after all expenses and assume reinvestment of dividends. Yield is based on the Fund's trailing 12 months' dividends. Active share is a measure of how the Fund's portfolio differs from the DNSCI (XIC). Small companies are represented by the DNSCI (XIC).

Standardised past performance

Discrete total return performance over 12 month periods to 31 December 2025:

Growth (%)	2025	2024	2023	2022	2021

Risk warnings

Capital may be at risk as the value of investments may go down as well as up and is not guaranteed; therefore investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Past performance is not a guide to future performance, nor a reliable indicator of future results or performance.

Investments in shares of smaller companies are generally considered to carry a higher degree of risk as the market for their shares may be less liquid than that for shares of larger companies, making shares of smaller companies more difficult to buy and sell.

The performance of shares of smaller companies may be more volatile than the shares of larger companies over short time periods; therefore investors should regard such investments as long term.

There can be no guarantee that the investment objective of the Fund will be achieved or provide the returns sought by the Fund.

An investment in the Fund is only suitable for investors who are capable of evaluating the merits and risks of such an investment and who have sufficient resources to be able to bear any losses which may arise from such an investment (which may be equal to the whole amount invested). Such an investment should be regarded as long term in nature and complementary to existing investments in a range of other financial assets and should not form a major part of an investment portfolio.

The dealing spread of the Fund, which represents the difference between the buying and selling prices, will have an impact on the realisable value of any investment made in the Fund, particularly in the short term. To mitigate the impact of capital erosion, investors should regard investments in the Fund as long term.
