Monthly investment commentary: April

After a challenging March, stockmarkets recovered in April, as the on-going conflict in the Middle East continued to define the market narrative. In the UK, smaller companies performed better than large, reversing some of the under-performance from the prior month. The Fund benchmark DNSCI (XIC) rose by 6.3%, with the Fund similarly rising by 6.1%. The large cap dominated FTSE All-Share was up by 2.8%.

Fund holdings in housebuilders Crest Nicholson and MJ Gleeson were weak as the Middle Eastern turmoil stoked inflation expectations, which threaten to feed through to higher mortgage rates. Buyer affordability is being challenged while build costs are reaccelerating. Crest warned of lower profits, with the sector-wide issues exacerbated by the failure to sell undeveloped land. Discussions with lenders are under way ahead of a likely covenant breach. Aberforth's engagement with the company has been stepped up against the background of the very low valuation versus the reported book value.

The Fund's biggest winner in the month was XP Power. A trading update revealed broad positive momentum across the order book for its power controls. Strong demand from semiconductor manufacturing equipment customers reflects the AI-fuelled upswing in chip demand. Despite this, the stockmarket continues to value XP at a material discount to overseas listed peers.

Other winners for the Fund included S4 Capital, which extended its post-results gains from March, and Gamma Communications, which revealed several takeover approaches.

Risk warnings

Capital may be at risk as the value of investments may go down as well as up and is not guaranteed; therefore investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Past performance is not a guide to future performance, nor a reliable indicator of future results or performance.

Investments in shares of smaller companies are generally considered to carry a higher degree of risk as the market for their shares may be less liquid than that for shares of larger companies, making shares of smaller companies more difficult to buy and sell.

The performance of shares of smaller companies may be more volatile than the shares of larger companies over short time periods; therefore investors should regard such investments as long term.

There can be no guarantee that the investment objective of the Fund will be achieved or provide the returns sought by the Fund.

An investment in the Fund is only suitable for investors who are capable of evaluating the merits and risks of such an investment and who have sufficient resources to be able to bear any losses which may arise from such an investment (which may be equal to the whole amount invested). Such an investment should be regarded as long term in nature and complementary to existing investments in a range of other financial assets and should not form a major part of an investment portfolio.

An investment trust is a public limited company, the shares of which are traded on the main market of the London Stock Exchange. Accordingly, the ability of shareholders to sell their shares will be dependent on the market price of the shares. The shares may trade at a discount or premium to their net asset value.

Investment trusts may borrow money in order to make further investments. This is known as gearing. The effect of gearing can enhance returns to shareholders in rising markets but will have the opposite effect on returns in falling markets.
