Monthly investment commentary: August

August saw re-escalation in the Iranian conflict, contributing to higher bond yields on the expectation of more inflation. Offsetting this more challenging macro backdrop for the UK was the report of consumer confidence reaching a two-year high. Domestic stock markets advanced, with smaller companies continuing to recover ground on their large-cap peers. The FTSE All-Share returned 0.7%, behind the DNSCI (XIC) benchmark's 3.9%. The Fund outperformed, returning 5.6%.

Leading the Funds winners was Ecora Royalties. A July trading update had highlighted the strengths of the existing portfolio. This was followed by renewed global inflationary concerns supporting the commodities over which it holds royalties in August. Elsewhere, Dialight continued its strong run as its business turnaround builds. Sector peer XP Power released results confirming order book strength, particularly from semiconductor manufacturing equipment customers. Halfords Group upgraded profit guidance, helped in part by the recent warm weather boosting demand for bikes and touring equipment. Conversely, Wilmington was weak despite a trading update bringing no great surprises. Elsewhere, Sabre Insurance Group gave back a little of its strong year to date performance. Results confirmed full year guidance.

Meanwhile, M&A continued to positively impact performance, with Gamma Communications rising after confirming discussions with potential acquirors. Bodycote also announced the receipt of possible offers from private equity bidders. The emergence of multiple confirmed private equity suitors in each case continues to highlight the attractive valuations on offer in UK smaller companies.

Risk warnings

Capital may be at risk as the value of investments may go down as well as up and is not guaranteed; therefore investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Past performance is not a guide to future performance, nor a reliable indicator of future results or performance.

Investments in shares of smaller companies are generally considered to carry a higher degree of risk as the market for their shares may be less liquid than that for shares of larger companies, making shares of smaller companies more difficult to buy and sell.

The performance of shares of smaller companies may be more volatile than the shares of larger companies over short time periods; therefore investors should regard such investments as long term.

There can be no guarantee that the investment objective of the Fund will be achieved or provide the returns sought by the Fund.

An investment in the Fund is only suitable for investors who are capable of evaluating the merits and risks of such an investment and who have sufficient resources to be able to bear any losses which may arise from such an investment (which may be equal to the whole amount invested). Such an investment should be regarded as long term in nature and complementary to existing investments in a range of other financial assets and should not form a major part of an investment portfolio.

An investment trust is a public limited company, the shares of which are traded on the main market of the London Stock Exchange. Accordingly, the ability of shareholders to sell their shares will be dependent on the market price of the shares. The shares may trade at a discount or premium to their net asset value.

Investment trusts may borrow money in order to make further investments. This is known as gearing. The effect of gearing can enhance returns to shareholders in rising markets but will have the opposite effect on returns in falling markets.
