Monthly investment commentary: October

October saw government bond yields retreat from the highs reached in the sharp third-quarter sell-off. Oil rose again, with conflicts on several fronts showing little sign of resolution. Domestic attention turned to John Healey's first Budget as chancellor, which passed with limited fanfare. Markets shrugged it off. UK equities rose, with the FTSE All-Share gaining 1.1%, while the DNSCI (XIC) benchmark rose 1.4%. The Fund did better still, rising 2.8% on a total assets basis.

Turning to the Fund's winners, Rathbones reported higher operating income in its trading update and reaffirmed its margin target, bringing relief after what had been a difficult year for the shares so far. Wickes pointed to resilience against a subdued backdrop for the UK consumer, with retail revenue growth accelerating. Elsewhere, MONY Group recovered from its second AI-related sell-off this year. M&A was again an influence on performance. Kenmare Resources confirmed interest from International Resources Holdings and later renewed its implementation agreement with the Mozambique government.

Among the Fund's losers, City of London Investment Group reported net outflows in its quarterly update. XP Power gave back some recent gains. Strong order growth was overshadowed by concerns about the sustainability of demand from semiconductor equipment customers and about AI more broadly. Halfords confirmed its upgraded guidance, but the shares fell as planned investment will weigh on second-half profit.

Risk warnings

Capital may be at risk as the value of investments may go down as well as up and is not guaranteed; therefore investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Past performance is not a guide to future performance, nor a reliable indicator of future results or performance.

Investments in shares of smaller companies are generally considered to carry a higher degree of risk as the market for their shares may be less liquid than that for shares of larger companies, making shares of smaller companies more difficult to buy and sell.

The performance of shares of smaller companies may be more volatile than the shares of larger companies over short time periods; therefore investors should regard such investments as long term.

There can be no guarantee that the investment objective of the Fund will be achieved or provide the dividends and returns sought by the Fund.

An investment in the Fund is only suitable for investors who are capable of evaluating the merits and risks of such an investment and who have sufficient resources to be able to bear any losses which may arise from such an investment (which may be equal to the whole amount invested). Such an investment should be regarded as long term in nature and complementary to existing investments in a range of other financial assets and should not form a major part of an investment portfolio.

An investment trust is a public limited company, the shares of which are traded on the Main Market of the London Stock Exchange. Accordingly, the ability of shareholders to sell their shares will be dependent on the market price of the shares. The shares may trade at a discount or premium to their net asset value.

Investment trusts may borrow money in order to make further investments. This is known as gearing. The effect of gearing can enhance returns to shareholders in rising markets but will have the opposite effect on returns in falling markets.

The Fund's Ordinary shares (Ords) are geared by the Zero Dividend Preference shares (ZDPs) and rank for repayment of capital after the ZDPs and any creditors of the Fund. A positive net asset value for the Ords will be dependent upon the Fund's assets being sufficient to meet the prior capital entitlements of the holders of the ZDPs. The Ords should therefore be regarded as carrying above average risk. The ZDPs are not a protected or guaranteed investment. In particular, should the Fund be wound up prior to its planned winding up date, holders of ZDPs would only receive their accrued capital entitlement to the date of winding up - which would be less than the final anticipated capital entitlement of the ZDPs.
